(she/they)

Fayetteville, GA

Carolyn Rose-Grayson is an emerging interdisciplinary artist based in Fayetteville, North Carolina. Her work aims to explore the human condition and the intersections of identity in an ever-changing landscape, while also empowering and uplifting the experiences of historically marginalized communities, all through creative means.

Carolyn's latest project, "Strange Fruit Zine," features a collection of works, made by her and other artists, addressing themes of transgressive resistance in QTBIPOC communities.
